My Dear Captain Need

Your very welcome present reached me on the morning in which I departed from Golungo Alto and I assure you made me feel extremely grateful for your kindness.
I dont expect to shoot anyone with it, but believing in M^r Roebuck's definition of moral force as "physical force in perspective" I think its influence will be decidely beneficial During my journey down to the Portuguese possesions we found the natives extremely impudent [0002]
often surrounding us and demanding a man, ox or gun for leave to pass through their country and sometimes they pointed their guns at me or aimed a blow at my head with a sort of broad sword which they have. It was difficult to appease them for we had nothing left to give them. In such cases your weapon would have been of much service for they have a salutary dread of percussion arms. they have too an insuperable objection to cannon Indeed the Portuguese keep them in subjection wonderfully well by using this fear as one of their arms Pungo Andongo contains a battery of four guns three of which are perched on cross sticks. and they do as effectually for keeping the [0003]
natives in awe as if mounted on the best artillery carriages

I wait here a few days or untill the mail which leaves Loanda on the 16th currt. arrives. I am exceedingly anxious to hear the news of the war in the East. the African sun does not burn out our amor patrial. About 30 miles East of this we cross the river Quango or Congo. the smaller branch of the river ajacent to which you lay so long on the look out. We cross the Casai or Kasye in Lat 17° 22 and that is said to be the principal branch of the Zaire. It however goes away to the East after we see it. And if you should ever come up to explore it you will find it [0004]

watering an immense extent of territory It is said to go round to Matiamvo who lives about 6° of Long. East of this and who is reported to be the greatest sovereign of this part of Africa. Civilization must make more rapid progress than it has done or we shall be all mouldering in our graves long before it reaches him.

Again thanking you for kind and disinterest present and with the earnest prayer that God may bless and preserve you.

I am Dear Sir

yours very sincerely

David Livingston
