My Dear M<sup>r</sup> Murray

Having been absent in Edinburgh
I did not receive
your note till this morning - Oswell
would attend to
the Preface but
to be sure I sent him
a note to point out
the second line
from top of page IV
also to add a
single sentence to

[0002]

Dedication such as you suggested.

The delay till Nov<sup>r</sup>
is all right & proper

I mean to write
to Madame Hocédé
tomorrow and I shall
accept the offer
you kindly made,
and trust to you
to pay for Agnes
as she requires it,
and put down
whatever may be necessary against
me in your account
It is £120 a year

[0003]

and something for washing, and
Music, possibly German - so that
her time may be fully occupied

and she be fitted
for making her
own way in
the future should
she not have me
to aid her.

I did not write
to Madame Hocédé
sooner because I wished to consult with M<sup>r</sup> Young & saw him yesterday.

[0004]

Professor & M<sup>rs</sup> Buchanan are so much affected by the recent loss of a most promising and only son that I do not like to trouble
them about
Agnes,
and if you & M<sup>rs</sup> Murray would give her a word of advice
and direction in
my absence, it will
be a great obligation
Should the money
matter be convenient
then I need not say anything about
Agnes to the Trustees
Yours ever faithfully
David Livingstone
