6 March Lyra in sight

Rovuma Bay

5th March 1861

Dear Captain Washington

We have been here eight days waiting for H.M.S. Lyra with coals - cannot concieve what detains her as we expected her on the

1st and Captain Oldfield is not the man to delay without cause.

Rovuma promises

fairly. A very large deep bay. the

[0002]

river's mouth a mile wide, and no bar.

M<sup>r</sup> May got no

bottom at seventeen fathoms across the mouth. An immense

body of water rushes

out. We went up

some eight miles in the boat and found

it to be in full flood

High land begins

about that distance from the mouth

so we seem to have a very short delta

[0003]

It [(country)] is well wooded & many snags shew

that character higher up. People speak

the same language

as at Senna (nearly) so we shall get on.

We expect the Bishop

by Lyra. He agreed, not without a pang,
to postpone landing in Africa for three months. This takes him over the three most unhealthy into the three most healthy

[0004]
months of the year and should Rovuma
answer our expectations he will make his settlement there & so will we quite away from Portuguese pretensions. Had we taken them up to Murchison's Cataracts
it would have been subjecting them to the risk run by the Linyanti mission
His (the bishop's) luggage & some of his people are landed at Johanna

[0005]
Should Rovuma not prove favourable we can go back to Shire & in the healthiest time as soon as we see that there is a pathway to Nyassa we go to examine it while the Pioneer goes to Johanna to bring the whole party. We believe the language may be studied there as it is said to be the Makoa dialect. We like what we have seen

of the bishop and his party very much and rejoice much to see them as the

[0006]
first installment of a mission destined

I hope to do great good in Africa

I have to beg you to correct a mistake into which I fell in the prescription of our famous Fever Powder
We went over to the N.W. to examine whether a creek shown in the chart as a mouth were really so.
It opens into the bay

[0007]
near its northern extremity but it is simply a creek, there is a mouth more to the N.W. - no doubt as we got into a goodly stream of fresh water by going S.W. and went all day without regaining the main stream [in the West] of Rovuma sleeping in the boat I waked & recollected that I had given the proportion of calomel which ought to have been Rhubarb & should you send the [0008]

enclosed to D<sup>r</sup> MacWilliam this mistake will be corrected

M<sup>r</sup> May knows his work and I am right glad of the prospect of getting at last
to mine. We cannot part with our white
crew, and a month in the river will be no great risk. We promise them double pay while in the river. I keep Rowe as he is of great use to us ashore.
