

Letter to Charles A. Alington

Livingstone, David, 1813-1873

Published by Livingstone Online (livingstoneonline.org)

[0001]

Burnbank Road

Hamilton

20 June 1865

My Dear M^r Alington

A telegram with the news of my mothers death on Sunday 18th called me away from Oxford- and by travelling all night I got to Hamilton at 8 this morning. I found

[0002]

your letter here & thank you for your kind present.

a patent hammock

I shall value it
the more on account of the kind good will with which it is presented .

My mother of whom you kindly speak was better when I left to go to Oxford & continued so till quite near the closing scene -
On being told her saviour

[0003]

seemed welcoming for her she expressed humble trust in Jesus - gave her last look to my little girl & saying

"bonny wee lassie"
fell asleep in him.
Another I hope of those for whom we give thanks.
You must excuse
my referring to what is at present uppermost in my thoughts.

I met your friend - probably

[0004]
school fellow. Reid, I think is the name -
but I was introduced to so many that I forgot names -

I am glad to hear of Captain Gardner's safe arrival -
And am ever
Affectionately Yours

David Livingstone