My Dear M<sup>r</sup> Murray

I return the drawings with the titles corrected If not too late the burdens of the carriers at Loanda could be improved if put thus If not troublesome the man of the woodcut

[0002]

of the rocks of Pungo Andongo
might drag those far back a little more into line & not copy the figure
intended for me from Andersons
work with a gun
under my arm
He makes me look
black like a Hottentot
if he bent the horns

[0003]

of the ox down & took away the gun it would not look so like
imitation of Anderson I am not anxious about it however and if it will be any bother I am

content

I submit to your judgment other three drawings which are like the head dresses

[0004]
of the Balonda and Bashukulompo.
If they will do for woodcuts in the page - I send the whole by M<sup>r</sup> Wilbraham Taylor 1 Robert St.
Adelphi, Strand
where I shall feel obliged if your man calls tomorrow
I have two pieces

[0005]
of Manuscript since I saw you last but one is not quite recopied by my next door neighbours
They will be at Robert St. on Friday. they contain more than when written by myself, and are probably more correct
as I go over them

[0006]
after my amanuensis
Do you know
Prof. Andrew
Buchanan's works?
He was my professor in Glasgow and I believe he would lend a hand when it comes to the revision as he is a great friend
of mine

[0007]
I am informed

by D<sup>r</sup> Daubeny that they propose
the degree of D.C.L.
for me at Oxford
This will look well on the title page

Yours Ever

David Livingstone

the text

In shooting by night
animals are more
frequently wounded
than killed. the flowing life stream increases the thirst so that they come slowly up to drink in spite of the danger their feeling is "I must drink
though I die"

the emasculation

In shooting by night
animals are more
frequently wounded
than killed: the loss of the flowing life stream increases the thirst so that in desperation they come slowly up to drink
in spite of the danger appearing as it were,
to feel that they must drink, even though they were to die for it

Just glance please at his arithmeticthe concentric rings of a tree are of course counted from the centre or semidiameter. He does not know that but counts the diameter.

Then a man at forty sees 5 ceremonies 10 would of course make him double or 80 & one more or even about 90 Your man says he would then be 26!!!

[0011]

The Egyptian cast of countenance is correct. I was struck by the close resemblance the faces on the mummy cases bear to Sekeletu's mother!
& others. Adams sends me three copies of his letter, they threatened the editor of the Record with the law for what he said about it.
