

Letter to John Livingstone

Livingstone, David, 1813-1873

Published by Livingstone Online (livingstoneonline.org)

[0001]

[70] Burnbank Road

[Acc. 912.] Hamilton 20 June

1865

My Dear Brother

I have to give you the intimation
of our mother's
departure to a better
world on Sunday
the 18th (curr.) and
beg you to com - municate the same
to Neil and any other relatives at
your convenience

[0002]

She had been long
confined to bed but
an attack of Bronchitis took away most
of her remaining strength.
She lingered for more
than two months
in excessive weakness
& the
unremitting attention
of Janet & Agnes
night & day - Janet
desires me to say
that she would have
written you long
ago but could not.
Mother was calm
& collected to the last

[0003]

When the changes came [71] near Agnes said to her "" Jesus is coming for you. Can you
lippen to him."" She replied ""Yes."" - gave her last look to
Anna Mary & said

“”bonnie well lassie””
&fell asleep. She
is to be buried
beside Father on 22 or 23^d

I was at Oxford
at the time. Left her
a week ago better -
and she continued

[0004]
so till the change came.
A telegram called me
away yesterday
morning & by travelling
express I arrived
this morning - and
thank Him who
after sparing her
82 years has preserved
her faithful to himself
All the rest are well -
No word of poor
Robert - Give our
love to all yours

Ever affectionately
yours -

David Livingstone