My Dear Madam

I know M^r

Taylor very well

and the circumstance

also which induced

him to write to the

Admiral. A M^{rs}

Bevan, wife of a London banker

wished to present

[0002]

me with something

and as M^r Taylor

thought that this meant something

handsome I mentioned the instrument. But as this was more than two months ago I suspect that he was too sanguine

in his expectations

for I have heard

nothing more of it from him since

I shall see him

[0003]

in a day or two and then proceed to get the instrument for myself. & I should like to know if they are to be had in London & where

I dont like to be troublesome and

hope you will excuse

this

I am Yours Truly
David Livingstone
M^{rs}. A. Smythe.
