My Dear Sir

On recieving
your note I wrote to (Col) Taylor &
he spoke to the Sultan about the Captains disobliging conduct. The Sultan thought matters would all come smooth

[0002]

This was not at all satisfactory and set me to find out
some other means of influencing
Captain Mahomet.
but I found out that he is a great drunkard whom the Sultan cannot get on well without
So I have to submit somewhat

[0003]

in the same way that the Sultan has to do, and I hope that the beasts & men
may arrive
safely in spite of him. I formerly met a Captain

who had this man on board from England &
the only way of keeping him
sober was to deny

[0004]
having any more
spirits aboard!

Thanking you
for the trouble you kindly took

I am sincerely yours

David Livingstone

David Livingstone

Born 1817 - died

African traveller and missionary

In 1856. Dr Livingstone had during his 16 years wandering travelled no less than 11,000 miles, whilst endeavouring to spread the blessing of Christianity thru lands never before trodden by the foot of an European.
He subsequently laid down his life in his noble endeavour to check the slave trade.
