Thos Maclear Esq.
My Dear Sir,

I am sorry that all I have yet to say to you amounts only to 0. I have been detained here during the last four months in consequence of the Boers having seized our path to the interior. - Now however that the rains have commenced I can pass by a still more westerly path in spite of them. - I shall start tomorrow and hope that when I next write I shall have something of interest to communicate (all

[0002]

all about the Unicorn, Salamander, Phoenix &!) You must be kind enough to take this in the light of a parting salutation. -

I had several hindrances in the way up - These prevented me from falling into the hands of the Boers, for it if I had come along as quickly as I wished I should have been at Kolobeng at the very time the Commando rifled my house, - they expressed much sorrow because they had not got my head as well as my property. They hate me cordially, and I don't think there is much love lost between us. The reason

[0003]

reason why they distinguish me so much is the fact that the Bakuanis fought bravely. - They have attacked and dispersed eight Tribes during the last ten years and not a single boer was ever lost by the hand of a Native. Having guns and horses they keep completely out of the way of the blacks. But the Bakuanis managed to kill about thirty five of the Boers, therefore that Skellum Dokter must have taught them. - M^{rs} M. must try and fancy his Reverence "teaching the young idea how to shoot" boers, when she thinks of missionary missionary life in the interior of Africa. I am very much grieved at this outburst on the part of the Boers. I can assert most positively that Sechele gave them no cause for offense except that he would not prevent Englishmen from passing him to the north. - They made frequent attempts to induce him to do so, thinking by that means to divert the trade in ivory through their own Territory. - But the path through Kuruman and Kolobeng was discovered in its entire course by Englishmen and they have hitherto carried on the

the trade. - It does not seem right for our Government to hand over this path to the Boers. Previous to my residence at Kolobeng there was no trade and petty wars were of frequent occurrence but trade was soon established not only with the tribes in the vicinity of Kolobeng but with many in the Countries far beyond. - And if you look at the map you will see that our path runs to the westward of the Boer Territory, the nearest point occupied by the Boers is at least a degree of longitude east of our route. And then this is the only route by which the

[0006]

the interior of Africa is open. - The fever presents a barrier on almost every other side. One of the Chief objects of my present expedition is to investigate the character of that disease which is the main obstacle to Africa being opened to beneficial intercourse with the rest of the world. - If I can only discover a healthy range of Country and means to foil that terrible plague, I shall be content to let the Unicorn [...] sleep in everlasting oblivion. - The blocking up of our path this way only makes me more determined to find out another on either

[0007]

either one coast or the other. My detention here has been difficult to bear, but my first hindrances having been the means by which a kind Providence prevented me from falling into the hands of the Boers, I am encouraged to hope that the present may have been the means by which through God's mercy I may escape being a victim of the fever. I have written to Sir John Pakington complaining bitterly against the loss of our path and the destruction of my own and the English hunters' goods which were deposited in my house. - I have not yet got the length of taking joyfully

[0008]

joyfully the sporting of my goods, - my books were torn to pieces and the leaves scattered to the winds, and the bottles containing medicines all smashed. I would have forgiven them, if they had only taken the property which they could have used, - but having destroyed my medicines and library I feel quite grumpy when I think of a big fat Boer up lying on my sofa and drinking coffee out of my wife's coffee pot, Ugh! I suppose King Pretorius will write his despatches on my wife's writing desk. Well i hope to get over it in time. I would not grudge my

[0009]

my losses if the Government would only secure our path for all who choose to travel it. My house was situated eight miles from the Tours of the plundering of it has nothing to do with their policy to the Natives.
As I am nobody I scarcely expect the Government will take any notice of the affair. I hear from Mr^r L. that Oswell is already casting a longing eye back to >Africa.

I am very sorry that I stupidly left without saying goodbye to M^r Morton. I was somewhat like one of our girls who was quite stupified by the sight of Cape Town I

[0010]

I had not all my wits about me. Will you be kind enough to present my apology and salutations to M^r M. the girl above mentioned found her tongue again when we got away and the nearer we get to her home it runs the faster. - I expect when we reach Kolobeng it will be the "perpetual motion" at last. -

With many kind salutations to M^{rs} M. and family Believe me, Yours very Sincerely
Sig^d
