Rev^d D^r-Tidman

Dear Sir

Enclosed you will recieve a letter to Sir John Pakington, H.M. Secretary for the Colonies, I wrote to the Lieutenant Governor Darling an account of the attack of the Boers on Kolobeng and sent also a similar letter to H. Green the British Resident with the addition of a claim for compensation, my property having been destroyed in the violation of a treaty I scarcely expect any compensation but thought the more noise we made the less likely would they be to do the same thing over again. But the more I become acquainted with [^][the] present Governor - Sir George Cathcart's feelings the less hope [0002]

I have of the least favour being shewn to anything in the shape of either missionary or Hottentot. Indeed it would be unspeakably pleasing to Sir George to hang us all on one gibbet. He will never forgive the Hottentots for completely foiling him in war nor us missionaries because our belief that Hottentots have souls has turned out in connection with the name of this mighty man of valour, true all the world over.
Such being the case I mustered courage to write to his master Sir John Pakington.
I think I have good cause for complaint but whether I have done it in a proper manner and whether it ought to be presented at all I leave entirely to your decision

A M^r Codrington, a gentleman of large landed property in Wiltshire lost a good deal of property at Kolobeng. He had gone down the Limpopo on a hunting expedition and when he returned his cattle and goods were gone. As he has Parliamentary influence he will make some noise about the affair. He goes home to England. now only one half of his cattle were taken and the other half were by some mistake left behind. Sechele sent them out to M^r Moffat, and though an attempt was made by the person who had them in charge to steal them, the people here pursued them - overtook the thievish Englishman - [^](a M^r Simpson)] fined him and the price of the missing cattle and such as remained are in custody here for the owner. It is pleasant to see the people making efforts to promote justice and perhaps it is not always wrong even to fight for their country Rains have fallen and I have nearly succeeded in getting a complement of men. I fully intend starting from this on the 14th currt.

I advised you of £10. for books from M^r MacLehose and another £10. for clothing from M Drummond, neither of which sums, though deducted from my salary have yet been drawn

They will be applied for soon. I gave Mebaloe £10. in consideration of his losses at Kolobeng and because he had kept school and other services and remained at his work up to the commencement of the firing. He is now at Kuruman

Believe me yours Affectionately

David Livingston

I have written during my sojourn here An Analysis of the Sechuana It may be accepted by the Asiatic Journal. If publised some months hence you will see I have some important objects in view [in it]
