My Dear Mother

It is rather difficult to write to you for never a word have I recieved in answer to my other letters - but here goes and it will shew you at least that you are not forgotten.

We are working hard at what some can see at a glance the importance of, while to others we appear as following after the glory of discovering [0002]

Lakes, mountains, jenny nettles and puddock stools. In reference to the latter I always remember a story told me by the late D<sup>r</sup> Philip with great glee. When a young minister in Aberdeen he visited an old woman in affliction and began to talk very fine to her on the duty of resignation trusting hoping and all the rest of it when the old woman looked up into his face and said "peer thing, ye ken naething about it." this is what I say to those who set themselves up to judge another man's servant [0003]

We hope our Good Master may permit us to do some good to our fellow men; And that his great name may be glorified in our lives & by our deaths. Charles is with me - suffers sometimes from fever but thank God I have escaped as yet and I believe we have found out the cure for that complaint which has long been the bane of Africa. We have opened a large region and are hoping that the church missionary society will soon occupy it.

[0004]

We are hoping too that our work will cut up a very large section of the slave trade but our reasons for so trusting are too long to tell. May the almighty bless and keep you and grant you all the blessings you need. My love to Tom and all the rest.
I am unable to write to him at present but hope he is getting on with his learning and that he will be fitted thereby for our saviours service in some way which he may appoint

Ever Affectionately Yours

David Livingstone
