My Dear Captain Richards

My letters to you have been destroyed because I have been looked upon as a spy on the Zanzibar slave trade so you must kindly make allowances for my long silence - M^r Stanley an American gentleman takes this to the coast so I repeat my thoughtfulness to you for all you did in Young's Expedition and otherwise -

[0002]

My work would have been finished long ago
but from grievance of the situation D^r Kirk handed over the matter of supplies & men to Ludha a Bannian slave trader and he entrusted his slaves who curiously enough all had the idea that they were not to follow but force me back - £500 were thus squandered and again another £500 was placed in Ludha's hands. & I am now going East to catch the relics of the second £500 worth of goods from the slaves who like jolly fellows have been feasting on

[0003]

on them for 14 months the loss inflicted on me is over 2 years in time. 1800 miles
of tramp and nearly £1000 in money - but I hope to get over it all - You will have learned before this that the Nile rises in 10°-12° South When this became known it is said to have been awarded to Beke[,] Finlay[,] and Arrowsmith because they dreamed about it - this is interesting for as my Despatches will shew you the watershed from which the Nile arises is

[0004]

is some 700 miles long and to be fair the dreamers must have awarded to them also the discovery of division of labour in dreaming - Each to get 233 miles = Discovery to me means very hard work and the work is not yet finished - I go West again to the Western or seventh hundred miles of the watershed where the four fountains are separated to the West
possibly are the sources mentioned long ago
to Herodotus - I wish I could settle them in a good long snooze -

[0005]

The fountains are almost innumerable and all converge into large rivers and Lakes in the great Nile really a perpetual slope so far as I have seen it and no " Upper Nile basin" at all and I reached the level
ascribed to Gondokoro It goes through the country of the cannibals
called Manyuema
The slave trade lately began there as not trading in any sense it is simply cold blooded murder and it is all carried on

[0006]

by the money of Ludha and other Banian English subjects who though they dare not kill a gnat or flea are really and truly the very worst cannibals in all Africa - The money all comes from them and they manage adroitly to let the odium rest on their Arab agents -

I transmit by M^r
Stanley two pocket chronometers and two common watches -
all are dead though no accident befel any of my instruments except some by shipwreck

[0007]

which were going to be put in depot in case of those I took with me being lost. I retain one [^][dead] chronometer to try if I can get a longi[-] -tude by putting a weight on the key and observing successive sun's (alts) - and moon's distances. The watches I trouble you with because you have superior workmen one was dipped in water and I filled

it with oil to preserve it - The other had second stop hands but too small -

[0008]
If you can favour me by allowing your workmen to put a new dial & larger second face on it. I shall feel greatly obliged - It is a very good watch but too small - I am hoping to get the Aneroids
back to the sea to test them there again
one has altered considerably.

very sincerely yours

David Livingstone
