My Dear M^r Murray

he payments which
you will oblige me
by making for Agnes
are as follows:

One hundred & twenty pounds a year to Madame Hocédé,
and probably the best
way of doing it would be for an arrangement
to be made in Paris

[0002]

by which she could draw it quarterly - and also one Pound a month
as pocket money
for Agnes .

A sum will also be required for Music & German
masters and for washing, and this Agnes will ascertain and give you
information .

[0003]

She has clothing
enough to last till
she goes out of mourning and
then she will consult

M^{rs} Murray as to what dresses she may need, and
you will be good enough to take
M^{rs} Murray's opinion
as sufficient
authority for the amount necessary
to be spent in dress.

[0004]

In any question that might arise you will find M^r Oswell's judgment with your own sufficient for guidance: M^r Young's opinion will always be reasonable and
of value. But in all cases I am sure that you will act for the best or what at the time seems to be so and for that I shall be satisfied and thankful whatever may be the result .
