Scheit Fontein.

My Dear Sir

Herein you will recieve receive the fulmination of the Commandant Potgeiter who I believe has gone to a tribunal at which nothing but truth will be told It is a copy sent from the committee by the then secretary M^r Ashton. The answer which they sent me at the same time is I find not by me but it must be at Kolobeng and as soon as I can lay hands upon it I shall forward itA [re] - perusal of the document brought some circumstances to my mind which had nearly vanished from my memory. One was that when the Bakwains heard of the intentions of the Boers to molest me they instantly called a Peecho and resolved unanimously to defend their missionary with their blood. On my objecting to their exposing their lives on my account they replied it was on their own account for whatever was done to me was done to them. They intended to mislead the Boers into a strong ambushade if they found out by any means that they were approaching and a simultaneous attack was to follow by both guns & assegais. If they should come upon us at unawares the whole tribe was to rush [0002] to our house and defend us with their lives. Had Potgeiter come he would have met a very different reception from any he ever had before. The tribes he has attacked never could do him or his party on horseback any harm. His fighting has been a series of cold blooded murders. In his bloodthirstiness he has poured out drunk offerings to the Devil. What a terrible surprise such men must look upon their prowess in the still shades of Hades. No false pretences there of "making peace among the natives" and no Fredikants to baptize them into the belief that they are christians and no mistake and then land them in the "Land African". I am however preaching to you instead of writing a letter. Well when I saw the Bakwains were determined to doctor the Boers I thought it right to send my family out of the way M^{rs}L. was in child-bed but much preferred going westward with the Bakwain women to going to Kuruman. The Kurumanites pressed upon us the propriety of sending the family out there - and I did so about four months after the threats of the Boers had vanished into thin air. a short time after they left for Kuruman I departed for the Lake - the first time - I remember too that [0003]

the imputation of having run away nettled me more than all the rest. I wrote on the paper in pencil the words you see & left the letter in a conspicuous situation at Kolobeng in case they should come when I was absent at the Lake. I destroyed abou[...] 350 letters before going - and many of these I regret but felt unwilling anything should fall into their hands of which they could make any bad use

I am here in the house of M^r Alheit of Skeit Fontein and may inform you how we have succeeded hitherto. We have come but slowly. My oxen were lean but quite fresh. I used them only and by buying some and exchanging others as they became tired for fresh ones giving about 10/ on each for the extra flesh of the new ones I succeeded pretty well. I shall soon be at the River and thence will get on well. The oxen I have now are in good condition & will carry me thither quickly.. The waggon however is enormously heavy - This [^][loading] is one of those things I shall do but once in my life. We had to pass through a bad defile - and hired a span from a Boer to take us through. He took us into it but his large fat oxen could not move it farther. I inspanned our meagre beasts and [0004]

they walked out with it at once. The Boer then left us in disgust and when we had got fairly through wanted payment but this I declined.. I shall feel glad when I deliver the articles to their owners The wood work of the wheels cracks from the enormous strain There now take a lesson by my folly. Of George I have seen nothing though I have travelled so slowly. I gave him two men so as they do not make their appearance he must be on his way after us either by the road we hence come or by some other we shall be sure to meet at Kuruman I have been quite busy all the way with the Dictionary I did not know I had so many words in my head as I have put down but every time I sit down there is no end to them. They are hooked together by strange associations. I have not begun any thing else. The waggon is most inconvenient for writing. I can write only on my side and must doff & trek on my "inexpressibles" only when lying flat on my back. I must be getting old & illnatured now for the constrained positions of my waggon life rather makes me crusty than gentle. The longer one lives the more one learns, is however true

I have been reading the tour of the Bishop. He is quite an angel compared to me. Dont you see the effects of the Puseyitepentral belief in salvation by works. He is quite in earnest, no doubt of it he and the Archdeacon tramping it on foot Well done my hearties. If I had £800 or even £400 a year travelling expenses as you my Lord and your venerableness the Archdeacon have I would not be so self denying. No not I. I would sport good oxen in my waggon and good horses in my cart and should now be somewhere beyond your Lorship's diocese. Perhaps sitting at supper with the bishop of Kuruman aye with the Apostle of the Bechuanas.

You will have observed a great deal of ignorance apparent in his Lorship's notes and a great deal understood or rather presumed in the readers for whom it is intended- see the Preface. You are expected to believe that he passed through unknown regions and even where he seems to have been without a path you find him looking for M^r Harding's spoor. And mention is made of Captain Gardner but none of a body of troops which went through the same parts with a large number of [waggons] [0006]

The earnestness with which he works is however very pleasant and almost excuses the ignorance The sour looks at the Independants, the grinning with watering teeth at the Dutch Fredikant's salaries the Political partizanship and innocent gloating over two poor simpletons daughters of a London missionary.. He feels not all the while that he makes the least part of his book by imitating the Independants way of doing things. And as for the missionary's daughter's, bless his heart we could give him a couple of missionaries [...] yes a couple three times told and be no losers either.

I have nothing to tell about the Boers or any one else. Have heard nothing about the Caffie war since I left nor of Botha The Boers are certainly the remnants of the Lost Tribes of Israel they speak of nothing but Pounds, shillings, dollars guilders sheep & oxen. Their whole souls seem absorbed by this world's goods- Their talk is just exactly what you overhear in the Jews of London. I shall be glad when I hear something else.

[0007]

M^r Alheit is a fine friendly man. He does not believe in baptismal regeneration as do some of his bretheren. At least I believe so for when I said that the bishop liked him because of holding similiar views on baptism he laughed and said But we dont all believe in that doctrine He seems a great admirer of Luther. He has been successful here. Has 80 communi-cants but is plagued by the surrounding Boers badgering his people. Intends to remove to the Orange River with his peons but the present war prevents his gett[...] the necessary permission from Govern[...]

Please present kind regards to your sister. Ralph, Jessie and my worthy friend Willie. May God bless you all and help you who are in the forefront of the strife to be valient for the truth. & righteousness.

I lost my horse about a week ago a great affliction - he ran away. A Trader called Bredencamp going back [0008]

may find him and if he writes please know how to do with the beast. He was an excellent traveller but like many other travellers became disgusted with the way & went back. Malatsi my man spent a week in search of him Believe me ever yours

David Livingston
